The Juniata Advantage

- Design Your Exploration: International studies at Juniata is a separate academic unit that bridges multiple academic departments, making it easier to design a personalized academic program. Some recent examples include international venture creation and international peace studies.
- Gain Global Experience: After a five-course preparation and a foreign language sequence, spend a semester or a year studying abroad. Juniata has study abroad programs on every continent except Antarctica.
- Go Interdisciplinary: In addition to its varied, interdisciplinary faculty, international studies features study abroad experiences that often blend disciplines. For example, many Juniata students combine the study of environmental science with international studies while abroad in the Galapagos Islands, Ecuador.

Juniata’s Outcomes

International studies students go on to careers in international law, finance, translation, education, and social service. Other graduates pursue graduate school or professional degrees in law or business. Many earn doctorates in communications, international relations, and other disciplines at schools like Brandeis, The University of Wisconsin at Madison, Lille University, and the University of Pittsburgh.

Our Recent Graduates

- Mackenzie Coulter-Kern ‘14 was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship to teach English in Mexico for the 2015-2016 academic year.
- Fatema Juma ‘15 was one of 12 students across the U.S. to earn a Coro Fellowship, a public affairs leadership development program that uses the city as a classroom to train the next generation of change makers.
- Cheryl Mariani ’12 whose Program of Emphasis (POE) at Juniata was international studies, French, and economics, is enrolled in a doctoral program studying political science at the University of Delaware.
- Elise Mihranian ’14 is employed as a continuous improvement analyst at TE Connectivity in Harrisburg, PA.
- Michael Thompson ’12, whose Program of Emphasis (POE) at Juniata was international politics and economics, is pursuing a Ph.D. in Chinese Studies at the University of Michigan, after teaching English in Taiwan thanks to a Fulbright Fellowship.

“I love international studies because I have always been interested in other cultures and the world outside my own. Also, all the classes Juniata offers are very interesting and really challenge you to think beyond what you already know.”

—Kelly Reynolds ‘17

An International Studies POE Story

Understand the meanings and implications of globalization. Gain the ability to recognize cultural differences and to communicate with members of other cultures in their languages. Above all, develop the personal maturity, sensitivity to the perspectives of others, and self-confidence necessary to take an active role as citizens of the global community. Develop critical interpretive skills and become aware of, and sensitive to, ethical issues in global contexts. In short, develop the skills needed in a global job market.

Because the international studies department is interdisciplinary, you can choose many of the courses you’ll take. And, you’ll have plenty of hands-on international experiences to decide on as well. Students have interned in medicine and social work in Orizaba, Mexico, even teaching English at a bilingual school. Others have interned abroad at renowned museums.

Whether your cultural exploration is European, Asian, or African, you’ll enhance your sophistication regarding a variety of global issues at Juniata. And you’ll learn all this and more from faculty with a variety of specializations. So go ahead, prepare for a life of exploration.

“International studies is a broad POE, and the IS department at Juniata is extraordinarily flexible,” says Nick Trapane ’15. “I’ve been able to explore my interests in the Spanish language and studio art alongside international studies. And, soon, I studied abroad in Sevilla, Spain. At Juniata, there are endless possibilities.”

Faculty

At Juniata, 93 percent of faculty hold the highest degree in their field. In the international studies department, 100 percent of faculty have earned Ph.D.s, and they serve, first and foremost, as professors. They’re also members of the Modern Language Association, the American Council of Teachers of Foreign Languages and other professional associations. They’ve published in Slavic and East European Journal, Literary Studies in Poland and Diálogos and presented at research conferences in Moscow, Leipzig, Berlin, and Dresden. Their work has been supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Fulbright and Dougherty Foundations, and the Tinker Foundation.
